

The NDA Government has tried hard to meet the expectations in its first year. For realty sector, last one year has been a mixed bag - interest rates came back and policy reforms were introduced, but the land acquisition law and regulatory Bill remain where they were. It's now time to build on the foundation laid so far.

AMAN NAGAR, Director, Paras Buildtech

The intent to get things done is noteworthy. However, it is now that the team led by reformist PM should start executing. Political rhetoric has to be replaced by deliverables. The delay in land and tax reforms is testing the temperament of the investors, both domestic and foreign.

RAVI SAUND, COO, JMS Buildtech

It has been nearly 365 days since Modi was sworn in as the PM. But has life changed for the common man? In terms of perception, the answer would be a clear yes. Modi's fresh style of hands-on functioning came as a breath of fresh air for Indians. But with 12 months having melted away, people are now waiting to get a taste of the pudding.

ANIL KUMAR TULSIANI, CMD, Tulsiani Constructions & Developers

Apart from infusing a new wave of positivity in the real estate market and various encouraging policy announcements, the Modi-led government has successfully come over from the long prevailing policy paralysis at the Centre. In its foundation year, the Government has taken major steps to boost investment in real estate sector.

MANISH AGARWAL, MD, Satya Group

The Narendra Modi-led Government, it seems, has left no stone unturned in its efforts to bring positivity in the market sentiments. The announcements pertaining to the formation of REITs and the development of 100 smart cities have been remarkable initiatives.

ARJUNPREET SINGH SAHNI, ED, Solitaire Group

